

College and Career Readiness Standards Overview - ELA

Welcome

Notes:

Welcome to the College and Career Readiness Standards (CCRS) Overview English Language Arts (ELA) learning module. This online learning activity will take approximately one hour to complete; however, you can stop the module and log back in to view it again at any point. Be sure to use headphones or speakers and have a reliable internet connection as you work through this module.

Please click on the Next button to begin.

- Overview and Benefits of the CCRS.
- CCRS Organization.
- Tying CCRS to Instructional Practices.

Notes:

By the end of this module, you will be able to provide an overview and benefits to the College and Career Readiness Standards, also known as CCRS. You will also be able to detail the specifics of CCRS organization. In addition, you will understand how to tie CCRS to instructional practices.

Notes:

The College and Career Readiness Standards Overview, (CCRS) English Language Arts (ELA) module will introduce participants to the structure and the layout of the CCRS ELA standards, including the levels, content areas, and labels. The module will provide an introduction to the key shifts. Participants will learn the benefits of using the CCRS and how the standards apply to lesson planning and teaching for adult basic education and English as a second language adult learners.

Objectives

Objectives

1. Describe the purpose of the CCRS.
2. Identify at least two benefits of using the CCRS for adult education staff and learners.
3. Define vocabulary related to the organization of the CCRS.
4. List the content area included in the CCRS (Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, Language, Reading: Foundational Skills K-5, Mathematics).

Notes:

Here are the objectives for this module. Please go to the next slide to continue reviewing the objectives.

Objectives

5. Describe how the ELA Standards are organized (subject, levels, foundational skills).
6. Describe how skills progress with each level for each standard.
7. Describe the key shifts for English language arts instruction.
8. Describe how the standards connect to lesson planning and teaching ABE and ESL students.

Notes:

After you have reviewed the objectives, please go to the next slide to complete a warm-up activity.

Notes:

Welcome to Section One, Overview and Benefits of the CCRS. This section provides an overview and describes some of the benefits of using the College and Career Readiness Standards. By the end of this section, you will be able to:

- Describe the purpose of the CCRS.
- Identify at least two benefits of using the CCRS for adult education staff and learners.
- Define vocabulary related to the organization of the CCRS.

What are the College and Career Readiness Standards (CCRS)?

College and Career Readiness Standards Overview English Language Arts (ELA)
OVERVIEW AND BENEFITS OF THE CCRS

Pennsylvania
Adult Education
Resources

What are the College and Career Readiness Standards (CCRS)?

- Standards for adult education.
- Selected from the Common Core State Standards.
- Focused on college and career skills.

“The importance of college and career readiness for adult students cannot be overstated ... It is crucial, then, that adult education programs provide students the opportunity to acquire these skills to pursue their long-term career aspirations and goals.” (CCRS, p. 3)

Notes:

What are the College and Career Readiness Standards, or CCRS? The CCRS are standards for adult education that were selected from the Common Core State Standards. They are focused on college and career skills.

The skills addressed in the CCRS are essential for students, not only to do well on high school equivalency tests, such as the GED® or HiSET® exams, but also in order to be successful in postsecondary education and the workplace.

By mastering these skills, students will be more prepared to enter postsecondary education and training programs, without needing remediation (CCRS, p. 3). The CCRS also includes skills that learners will use in the workplace.

Notes:

The Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act, also known as WIOA, was signed into law in 2014. Our work in adult education is governed by this law, and this law requires the use of standards to guide instruction.

Adult Education and Family Literacy Guidelines

401 Quality of Instruction
At a minimum, quality instruction will:

1. Be grounded in research.
2. Incorporate the College and Career Readiness Standards for Adult Education.
3. Be provided by qualified staff.
4. Be contextualized.
5. Incorporate technology.

Notes:

In order to meet the WIOA requirements of standards adoption, The Division of Adult Education has implemented the CCRS which are aligned with the Pennsylvania Core Standards. The PDE Adult Education and Family Literacy Guidelines state that these standards must guide lesson planning and instruction.

Notes:

In addition to the requirements to use the CCRS standards, there are also many benefits of using the standards for programs, staff, and learners.

The CCRS identifies three key benefits to the utilization of the standards. These include consistent expectations between K-12 and adult education systems; the ability to create partnerships and common tools and materials between programs and states; and helping students prepare for assessments, such as the high school equivalency exams. Click the numbered circles to learn more about the three key benefits.

<1> Consistent expectations between K-12 and adult education systems so all students-whatever their pathway to graduation-will have access to the preparation they need to enter credit-bearing freshman courses without a need for remediation; (College and Career Readiness Standards, p. 6)

<2> Partnerships between and among states and programs to combine financial resources and human capital to create common tools and materials to support implementation; (College and Career Readiness Standards, p. 6)

<3> Student preparation for new assessment models using knowledge and skills identified by the CCSS required for the attainment of a high school diploma or its equivalent (e.g., GED®, Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers, and Smarter Balanced Assessment Consortium). (College and Career Readiness Standards, p. 6)

2.6 CCRS helps programs, instructors, and learners

College and Career Readiness Standards Overview English Language Arts (ELA)
OVERVIEW AND BENEFITS OF THE CCRS

Pennsylvania Adult Education Resources

CCRS helps programs, instructors, and learners

Programs

- Framework for curriculum, instruction, and assessment.
- Positive impact on outcomes reported anecdotally.

Instructors

- Guiding set of measurable skills for planning lesson objectives.
- Rigorous instruction intended to guide learners toward their goals.

Learners

- Provides consistent expectations for college and career skills.
- Instruction that enables learners to attain their goals.

Notes:

Additionally, using the CCRS can have benefits for your program, instructors, and learners.

Programs:

Using the CCRS can benefit your program in several ways. First, the CCRS clearly defines the content and academic skills needed for students. It provides a framework for your curriculum so that programs have more clarity on what skills to teach for students at each level.

Some programs have also said that they have anecdotally noticed an impact on outcomes after incorporating the CCRS into their teaching.

Instructors

Instructors benefit from using the CCRS for lesson planning because the standards provide clear guidance on what skills students need at each level. They provide measurable expectations that teachers can use to plan instruction and assess improvement.

While learning the standards and using them in lesson planning may take some time at first, instructors often find lesson planning becomes easier as they become more familiar with the standards.

The CCRS key shifts (which we'll further discuss in the module) also provide strategies that can be used in all lessons to ensure students are improving skills needed for workplace and academic success.

Learners

Learners benefit from receiving instruction that is aligned to the standards because it ensures they are being taught skills they will need for workplace and postsecondary education success. They also benefit by learning skills that are measured by the GED® and HiSET® exams.

When programs adopt the CCRS to develop their curriculum, students may find that instruction is more cohesive because the skills are presented in a progression aligned to skill levels.

<Closed Captioning for Video>

A few years ago, we began incorporating the standards into our lessons and into our materials. We did start to see great success with the students. It makes it easier in planning; we know how we're going to proceed. We know the standard that's supposed to happen next and what we should have covered before. We're not jumping around from one subject to the other. The first year we started it, we had easily 20% increase in the amount of level gains that we had.

For someone approaching this for the first time, I would advise not to fight it. Embrace it, accept it into your planning and into your instruction, and then your students get success. They're going to make level gains. They're going to learn in an expedient way. You'll have success with your students.

Notes:

Welcome to Section Two, CCRS Organization. By the end of this section, you will be able to:

- List the content area included in the CCRS (Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, Language, Reading: Foundational Skills K-5, Mathematics).

- Describe how the ELA Standards are organized (subject, levels, foundational skills).
- Describe how skills progress with each level for each standard.

CCRS Subject Areas

Notes:

The CCRS is divided into two main subject areas, English Language Arts and Mathematics. The ELA standards address skills related to: Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, Language, and Reading Foundational Skills. The Mathematics Standards are also included on this slide so you can see how they differ in organization; however, the focus of this module will be the ELA standards. For more information on the Mathematics standards, please consider viewing the modules for CCRS Math.

Notes:

The CCRS ELA standards are broken up into four strands: Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, and Language. Within each of these strands are anchors, which identify broad college and career readiness skills. There are a different number of anchors for each strand. Each anchor has five different Grade Level Groupings, A through E, which correspond with particular grade levels. Each Grade Level Group has one or more standards included. These standards list specific skill expectations for learners at different levels.

Organization of CCRS

Notes:

The CCRS also includes Foundational Skills for the K-5 grade range which outline “a set of reading acquisition skills designed to develop proficient readers with the capacity to comprehend varied texts across a range of disciplines.” (CCRS, p. 10)

These are Phonological Awareness, Phonics and Word Recognition, and Fluency. The Foundational Skills are arranged a bit differently than the other ELA standards and include only three levels for each skill.

Notes:

Now, let's consider the progression of skills within a single anchor from Level A to Level E. As you read from Levels A to E within each anchor, you will see that the standards become increasingly complex in terms of the skills learners are expected to have mastered.

Reading Anchor One says that the learner should be able to "Read closely to determine what the text says explicitly and to make logical inferences from it; cite specific textual evidence when writing or speaking to support conclusions drawn from the text.” Take a moment to read through the skills required at each level, A through E.

At Level A, the learner is expected to “Ask and answer questions about key details in the text.” Moving to Level B, the expectation is similar, but with the addition of answering who, what, where, when, why, and how. Level C adds the skills of referring to details and examples in a text, as well as quoting from a text, when explaining it and drawing inferences. As you move into Levels D and E you will see that they continue to become more rigorous and specific.

This progression through the levels of a CCR anchor standard is also applicable to English language learners. However, instructors need to provide English language learners with additional language supports and language-focused instruction to enhance their learning of these skills.

SECTION 3
Tying the CCRS to Instructional Practices

Section Preview

- Describe the key instructional shifts for English Language Arts.
- Describe how the standards connect to lesson planning and teaching ABE and ESL students.
- Identify sample students' CCR Levels.

Notes:

Welcome to Section Three, Tying the CCRS to Instructional Practices. By the end of this section, you will be able to:

- Describe the key instructional shifts for English Language Arts.
- Describe how the standards connect to lesson planning and teaching ABE and ESL students.
- Identify sample students' CCR Levels.

Key ELA Shifts

College and Career Readiness Standards Overview English Language Arts (ELA)
TYING THE CCRS TO INSTRUCTIONAL PRACTICES

Key ELA Shifts

KEY SHIFTS

1. Text Complexity — Qualitative/quantitative measures. Text structure. Vocabulary tiers.
also known as
2. Evidence — Text-dependent questions.
3. Building Knowledge — Non-narrative, nonfiction informational texts.

Notes:

The CCRS demands a shift in instructional practice to make the standards accessible to adult learners. In this module we will use the term key shift to reference the shift. You may also hear this being referred to as instructional shift or key advances. In regard to the CCRS, these terms reference the same thing: the overarching changes in instructional practices that will help learners to gain college and career readiness skills.

There are three key shifts in English Language Arts and English as a second language. They are Text Complexity, Evidence, and Building Knowledge.

Integrating text complexity in planning and instruction requires that the instructor analyze and measure texts to ensure that they are the appropriate level for their learners. Through quantitative and qualitative measures, the instructor identifies the text structure and tiered vocabulary.

The CCRS ELA also require critical analysis of text by learners. Students draw evidence from texts to support their claims and conclusions about the text. This task of finding evidence in a text is known as text-dependent questioning.

Building knowledge refers to reading, researching, and writing about non-narrative, nonfiction informational texts which help students build cross-disciplinary knowledge.

Employing these key shifts in your instruction will provide opportunities for learners to practice the skills that the CCRS require.

To learn more about this topic, please view the CCRS module focused on the key shifts.

Using CCRS in Lesson Planning

CCR Speaking and Listening Anchor 3: Evaluate a speaker's point of view, reasoning, and use of evidence and rhetoric.

Level C (grade levels 4-5): Summarize the points a speaker makes and explain how each claim is supported by reasons and evidence.

Steps:

1. Identify skills (verbs/actions) – “summarize” and “explain.”
2. Identify a context – “The points a speaker makes ...”
3. Plan an activity – Listen to a speaker, take notes, summarize and explain.
4. Plan an assessment – Verbal summary, use of rubric for scoring.

Notes:

Let's take a look at how we could plan a lesson using one of the CCR standards. Here is Speaking and Listening Anchor 3, “Evaluate a speaker’s point of view, reasoning, and use of evidence and rhetoric.” At Level C, the standard says that learners should be able to “summarize the points a speaker makes and explain how each claim is supported by reasons and evidence.”

1. Let's begin by identifying the skills the standard mentions. These can be found by locating the verbs or actions in the standard. In this case, the students should be able to “summarize” and “explain”.

2. Now, we determine the context in which they will be performing these actions. The standard mentions summarizing the “points a speaker makes.”

3. Therefore, we could plan an activity in which the student will be listening to a speaker and taking notes in order to gather information to provide a summary and explain the reasons and evidence given by the speaker to support his or her claims.

4. To assess whether the student is able to perform this skill, the student could verbally summarize the speaker’s points with the reasons and evidence given to support the claims. A rubric could be used for the learner to know the expectations of the assessment.

CCR Anchor 5: Analyze the structure of texts, including how specific sentences, paragraphs, and larger portions of the text (e.g., a section, chapter, scene, or stanza) relate to each other and the whole. (Apply this standard to texts of appropriate complexity as outlined by Standard 10.)
Know and use various text features (e.g., headings, tables of contents, glossaries, electronic menus, icons) to locate key facts or information in a text. (RI.1.5)	Know and use text features (e.g., captions, bold print, subheadings, glossaries, indexes, electronic menus, icons) to locate key facts or information in a text efficiently. (RI.2.5)	Describe the overall structure of a text (e.g., chronology, comparison, cause/effect, problem/solution) of events, ideas, concepts, or information in a text or part of a text. (RI.4.5)	Analyze how a particular sentence, paragraph, chapter, or section fits into the overall structure of a text and contributes to the development of the ideas. (RI.6.5)	Analyze in detail how an author's ideas or claims are developed and refined by particular sentences, paragraphs, or larger portions of a text (e.g., a section or chapter). (RI.9-10.5)	Analyze and evaluate the effectiveness of the structure an author uses in his or her exposition or argument, including whether the structure makes points clear, convincing, and engaging. (RI.11-12.5)

Notes:

Let's look at another example. Here is Reading Anchor 5: "Analyze the structure of texts, including how specific sentences, paragraphs, and larger portions of the text relate to each other and the whole." Let's imagine that the last time you addressed this standard with your learners, you focused on Level B with the students: "Knowing and using various text features to locate key facts or information in a text." Now, you have determined that the students are ready to move to Level C. How will you determine what the learners should now be doing?

Look at the standards for Level C. The first step is to identify the verbs, the actions or skills that the students will be able to do. For the first of the standards in Level C, please click on the verb. ["Describe the overall structure"] Great! The students will be able to describe the overall structure of something. Now, we need to determine the context in which they will be describing the overall structure. Next, click on the standard to indicate the context in which they will be doing this. ["of events, ideas, concepts, or information in a text or part of a text."] At this point, you'll want to begin to think about planning an activity in which learners will be able to successfully demonstrate the skill. Perhaps you will want your students to identify key words in the text which indicate a particular text structure. For example, students can look for words such as first, next, and then, which would indicate that its text structure is a chronology, or students could locate words and phrases such as therefore or as a result, which would show cause and effect. Students could highlight these key words, then write a short description of the text structure including evidence from the text. After modeling and guided practice, learners can work on this activity independently, which provides you, the instructor, an opportunity to assess their mastery of the skill.

CCRS Level Progression

College and Career Readiness Standards Overview English Language Arts (ELA)
TYING THE CCRS TO INSTRUCTIONAL PRACTICES

CCRS Level Progression

A	B	C	D	E
Ask and answer questions about key details in a text. (RI/RL.1.1)

Level E
The student will be able to cite at least two specific examples from each of two texts (one primary, one secondary) on the Battles of Lexington and Concord to compare different perspectives on the battles at various periods of time.

Cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text. (RI/RL.9-10.1)

- Application: cite specific textual evidence to support analysis of primary and secondary sources, attending to such features as the date

Notes:

Using the CCRS Reading Anchor we looked at earlier, let's consider how lesson objectives might look for each of the five levels.

At Level A, the student should be able to ask and answer questions about key details in a text; therefore, a lesson objective could be something like, "The student will be able to answer three questions correctly about key details in a short text about the American Revolution."

As we move to Level B, the standard adds more specific details. A lesson objective could be more specific, such as, "The student will be able to identify who was fighting and two reasons why they were fighting from text about the Battles of Lexington and Concord."

Here are examples of objectives for Levels C, D, and E.

Level C: The student will be able to cite at least two examples and one accurate quote from a text describing the causes of the Battles of Lexington and Concord.

Level D: The student will be able to cite at least two specific examples from each of two texts (one primary, one secondary) on the Battles of Lexington and Concord to summarize the causes and events leading up to the battles.

Level E: The student will be able to cite at least two specific examples from each of two texts (one primary, one secondary) on the Battles of Lexington and Concord to compare different perspectives on the battles at various periods of time.

Objectives Review

1. Describe the purpose of the CCRS.
2. Identify at least two benefits of using the CCRS for adult education staff and learners.
3. Define vocabulary related to the organization of the CCRS.
4. List the content area included in the CCRS (Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening, Language, Reading: Foundational Skills K-5, Mathematics).
5. Describe how the ELA Standards are organized (subject, levels, foundational skills).
6. Describe how skills progress with each level for each standard.
7. Describe the key shifts for English language arts instruction.
8. Describe how the standards connect to lesson planning and teaching ABE and ESL students.

Notes:

In this module, we've focused on the objectives listed on this slide. In a moment, you will take a short quiz to measure your new knowledge and skill based on the content of this module. Take a moment and read through the objectives. Do you feel comfortable with all of them? If not, you may go back to any of the earlier sections to review.

Reflection Questions

DIRECTIONS: Take a moment to think about the answers to these reflection questions.

- What are your key takeaways from this module (what did you learn)?
- What are two (2) things you want to immediately focus on implementing from this module in your own practice/position?
- What are one or two (1-2) things you learned from this module that you don't fully understand or are concerned about implementing in your own practice?
