Some tourist think lion hunting is very exciting. I think from the passage that is mostly frowned upon except for the people trying to kill them or make money off of them. They are an endangered species and the laws to protect the lions are poorly followed. Even by there own people! It sounds pretty sad for a lion to hunt for his food and in the end be hunted. Also in opinion lions being bred and raised to kill them is just as bad as dog fighting. Its is a very great thing that people track these animals to protect them. Otherwise they might all be dead. I'm sure we need these animals in the world for important reasons other than money. Why would they be here if we didn't?

According to the article the people disagree on lion hunting for sport must be legal. They have the strongest arguments. Because lions are an endangered species, and their numbers are shrinking rapidly and they are facing extinction.

Hunters kill lions just for fun. They don't kill lions in self-defense. On the other hand, the legal hunting money benefits just the private companies.

I don't think that lion hunting for sport should be legal. The article says that lions could become extinct soon. And some lion hunting is not done legally. The lions are lured into a place where they could be shot. That's not fair. The article says that it helps to create jobs. But I wonder if the people that are working are getting paid a fair wage. It says that some people pay $20,000 - $50,000 for hunting, but I bet the workers don't get to see alot of that money.
